OCLC™

The world's libraries.
Connected.

What is a Web Service?

- Exposes data at the machine-to-machine level
- Lets you mix and match from all sorts of sources and build your own apps (mashups)
- Engages the library software development community
- Wikipedia: mashup is a web application that combines data from more than one source into a single integrated tool

Why should we be interested?

Expose library collections in new ways

- via mashups and web apps

Strong Social Aspect - Community Building

- Allows Developers to create innovate applications
- User networks: students, researchers and the larger world

- Contributors
- Consumers

Part of connecting the community to the library

- Search WorldCat with OpenSearch and get RSS or Atom responses
- Find books, video, music and more in the WorldCat database
- Get Titles, Authors, ISBNs and OCLC numbers
- Get records in standard bibliographic citation formats (APA, Chicago, Harvard, MLA, and Turabian)
- Get links back to WorldCat.org for more information including geographically-sorted Library information

When did education become compulsory in Scotland and what was the likelihood of working class children being able to attend school in the 19th and early 20th century?

Thanks for your enquiry. Schooling in Scotland did not become compulsory until 1872, when the Education (Scotland) Act was passed. This applied to all children between the ages of 5 and 13.

Building a Catalog Search Box

One task that many small libraries can find daunting is embedding a keyword search box for their library catalog into their library website. This script helps make that easier by using the WorldCat Registry to look up a library's ILS Vendor and catalog url. Then based on this building a keyword search form that can be easily cut and paste into a website.

Input your institutions OCLC Symbol to have a search box auto-generated. If your catalog isn't currently supported a message stating this will be displayed. If you'd like to help add search boxes for additional catalogs like Koha, please send a message to the OCLC DevNet Listserv.
